

CFRAM Programme

Ireland's Catchment Flood Risk Assessment and Management (CFRAM) Programme is central to the medium and long-term strategy for the reduction and management of flood risk throughout Ireland. It delivers core components of the National Flood Policy whilst also meeting the requirements of the EU 'Floods' Directive.

Preliminary Flood Risk Assessment - This initial CFRAM stage saw an extensive national programme of data collection and analysis to identify the areas where flood risk would be further assessed. A national, formal consultation was undertaken in 2011.

Flood Hazard and Risk Mapping - The Eastern CFRAM Study involved further assessment of flood risk in line with social, environmental, economic and technical objectives agreed after formal public consultation in 2014. Data collection included historic flood event and rainfall records, and detailed floodplain and channel surveys of selected rivers. Hydraulic models determined flood hazard (where rivers or the sea is likely to flood in extreme events) and flood risk (the resultant impact on people, the economy and the environment). Flood mapping was presented at a series of Public Consultation Days early in 2015 and a national, formal consultation closed in late 2015.

Flood Risk Management Options - The Eastern CFRAM Study tested a range of options against flood risk management objectives to identify potential solutions. Options considered include high level measures to prevent future risk and detailed protection measures. Project options are available to be presented at a series of Public Consultation Days early in 2016; at which we are seeking comments about the options from stakeholders and the public.

Flood Risk Management Plans - The findings of the options consultation stage will inform draft Flood Risk Management Plans proposing a list of 'Preferred Options' that are tailored to each community; and which take into account those elements which are most important to each area (i.e. local economic activity, community facilities, infrastructure, the environment and local cultural heritage).

A further series of project Public Consultation Days, together with a national, formal consultation, will be held in summer 2016; at which we will be seeking comments about the draft plan from stakeholders and the public. The findings of the draft plan consultations will inform the development of a final plan in late 2016.

Upcoming Public Consultation Days

Preliminary Flood Risk Management Options will soon be available for comment at a series of Public Consultation Days taking place in February and March 2016 within the Eastern District (see table). The options which will be presented are structural and/or non-structural measures which have been identified for the sustainable management of flood risk.

Flood Risk Management Options have not been developed for a small number of the areas of further assessment within the Eastern District. There are two possible reasons for this. The first; is that the detailed assessment has determined that there is no risk associated with the given area. The second; is that where risk does exist, it is being managed at project level (for example Morell Flood Alleviation Scheme). Public Consultation Days for areas for which options have not been developed will be held in summer 2016 to offer the opportunity to comment on the Draft Flood Risk Management Plans.

All are welcome to attend the options phase Public Consultation Days. Staff from the Eastern CFRAM Study team will be present to discuss and receive comments on the options.

Stakeholder engagement and public participation are key components of the CFRAM Programme. Direct engagement with the Eastern CFRAM team offers stakeholders and the public the chance to understand and influence the plan-making process.

The Areas of Further Assessment in the Eastern District where a Public Consultation Day will be held in February or March 2016 are shown in red on the map with dates and locations detailed in the table.

Option phase Public Consultation Days were held in the Poddle and Camac high priority areas during 2013.
